SPOTLIGHT

INSPECTOR ANG XIN YAN

Tanglin Division

THOROUGH AND THOUGHTFUL

Inspector (Insp) Ang's job requires him to pay careful attention to facts and evidence. He shared, "Often, there is only one golden opportunity for you to collect the required evidence and confront the accused person. Missing out on such opportunities may result in the case being thrown out of court or give the accused person a chance to find a loophole that benefits himself instead."

However, Insp Ang knows that being compassionate is also part of the job. He once tried to help an alcoholic who had committed family violence. Working with a social worker, he attempted to persuade him to find a job and seek help. It was this very sense of compassion and thoroughness that led to him receiving the CP's Commendation Award.

INSPECTOR AMANDA LEE WEI ANN

Criminal Investigation Department

A CAREER THAT SHAPES YOU

Inspector (Insp) Lee grew up listening to her mother (who is herself a Senior Staff Sergeant in the SPF) share about her life in the Force, and how it shaped her as a person. These stories helped Insp Lee see how dedicated our police officers are in keeping our homes safe, and ultimately inspired her to serve as a police officer.

Under her parents' upbringing, she became a disciplined individual that helped ease her in to the training regime and job. Her mother, speaking from years of experience, said that she firmly believes that while policing work has become more challenging through the years, this is a career that helps her daughter learn useful life skills and appreciate the peace and harmony that we have now.
